

Demand that the Nigerian government act for girls who survived Boko Haram's violence!

To President Bola Ahmed Tinubu

For over a decade, the armed conflict in northeastern Nigeria between Boko Haram and Nigerian forces has affected millions of lives. For years, Boko Haram has been involved in widespread abductions and sexual violence, and the Nigerian military has illegally detained and displaced people. The conflict has led to a humanitarian crisis, and all parties to the conflict have committed crimes under international law and other violations of human rights.

Many of these girls and young women have managed to escape back to government-controlled areas but face new challenges. The crimes they were subjected to in captivity have left deep scars. Despite some family reunification efforts, the Nigerian government has largely failed to promote the girls' physical and psychological recovery and reintegrate them into society.

Sign and demand that the Nigerian government give these girls access to care, education and the opportunity for a dignified life.
